

Does Our Work Matter to God?

(Jeff Jones – Men’s Life Bloomington)

Overview: Many Christians go to work daily without an understanding of the connection between their work and careers, and what is God’s plan and purpose for their life. Most Christians separate their work and faith lives. And every Christian at work or in business faces challenges and test that makes it difficult to live a Christ like lifestyle. Our work does matter to God, and God does want us to work, so how do we fit our faith into our work, our work into our faith, and understand how our work is fulfilling God’s will for us?

Most of the time we want to focus on the 7th day, the day of rest. Today I want to focus on the remaining six days of our week, the work week and how it fulfills God’s plan for us.

Today, through our daily work we serve God. God is Lord of all of life so therefore every event in our life comes under His concern. In the book Your Work Matters To God, by Doug Sherman and William Hendricks, they write, “God uses everything in the workplace to train our character. He uses the evils we face, the people we cannot stand, the circumstances of tension and pressure, the tedium of long afternoons, the solicitations to compromise, the irritations of angry customers, the interruptions, the financial reversals, the deals that fall through, even the traffic on the way home (when all the students are back)—He uses all of it to make us more like Jesus.” God uses the workplace to train us to be conformed to the image of His Son.

So our needing to work, like everything else in this universe, was designed, created and is overseen by God. To me, work is something that falls into the same category as death and taxes. It is part of life, whether it is at a paying job, or taking care of your home on Saturday, it is part of God’s plan. You just cannot get around that fact that God wants us to work, He commanded us to work, and literally on day 1, God modeled for us how to work.

Genesis 1: 1-3 “In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. Now the earth was formless and empty, darkness was over the surface of the deep, and the Spirit of God was hovering over the waters. And God said, “Let there be light.” And there was light.”

This began the act of working. Then over the next 5 days he separated the light from darkness, created evening and morning, He created land, vegetation, stars, living creatures in the water and on land, and then God created man.

Genesis 1:26 Then God said, “Let us make man in our image, in our likeness, and let them rule over the fish of the sea and the birds of the air, over the livestock, over all the earth, and over all the creatures that move along the ground.”

God’s week was no vacation, it was work, and it pleased God when his work week was done and His job was done well.

Genesis 2: 1-3 Thus the heavens and the earth were completed in all their vast array. By the seventh day God had finished the work he had been doing; so, on the seventh day he rested from all his work. And God blessed the seventh day and made it holy, because on it he rested from all the work of creating that he had done.

And after this work was done, God took up his seat in the “C Suite”, and as we read in Genesis 1:26, God commanded man to go to work following the day of rest. So, man got his marching orders on what to do starting Monday morning. God clearly was, and is, in charge. But he wanted leaders, and partners on earth to run the day to day of this operation.

Questions:

- 1) Why do you think many Christians feel that their work does not matter to God or that their job seems second class in the Kingdom of God?

- 2) Your work has results:
 - a. If we believe that our work does not matter to God, then what will be our results? How will we likely feel?

 - b. If we believe that our work does matter to God, then what will be our results? How will we likely feel?
